WASHINGTON LETTER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22, 1900.

President McKinley has gone to Canton to remain until election day. He goes with absolute confidence in his re-election and in the election of a republican House. Governor Roosevelt, who has taken especial pains to post himself on the political conditions in the states he has spoken in, confirmed the President's advice from other sources as to the prospects for an overwhelming republican victory. Governor Roosevelt had a long conference with the President during which they went carefully over the whole campaign with mutual satisfaction. Governor Roosevelt said he was never feeling better and he certainly never looked better. Campaigning evidently agrees with him.

Secretary Hay, in common with everybody else in Washington, was surprised at the announcement of the Anglo-German agreement upon a Chinese program, and he was even more pleased than surprised. With Germany and England standing against the dismemberment of China, land-grabbing on the part of any of the powers, and for the permanent maintenance of the Commercial open door in China, we are absolutely sure to get all we desire—an open field and no favors in the trade of China. It may be that England and Germany were actuated by a desire to head off Russia, rather than to aid us in holding our trade rights in China, but doesn't concern us. The important thing about the combination is that it will aid us. That is sufficient for us. It has been the policy of this government from the first to oppose any dismemberment of China. Therefore, the Anglo-German agreement, whatever may have brought it about, is an endorsement of the policy of this government as announced last July.

Mr. T. St. John Gaffney, of New York, gave President McKinley a cheering picture of the outlook in that state, and after leaving the White House, he said: "The republicans will carry New York by more than 100,000 majority. I have been unable to discover any backsliders from the party with the exception of a few disappointed office seekers, whose fear of imperialism only became acute with their failure to secure political jobs. Some of these howlers against the President were applicants for any kind of an old job under his administration, and continued their office seeking after Governor Roosevelt was elected governor of New York. The spectre of imperialism did not alarm them then; the republic has only become endangered since their failure to secure office. I have respect for a man who changes his political views from some unselfish or patriotic motive, but I hold in contempt a person who leaves his party because he didn't get a job."

General R. D. Dyrenforth, Commander-in-Chief of the Union Veteran's Union, has issued an official letter to the veterans pointing out that it is to their advantage to support President McKinley.

This is the way the campaign in West Virginia strikes an intelligent farmer—Mr. George M. Thedick, who is now in Washington: "I am only a farmer, but I have followed the campaign in my state very closely and believe that when the votes are counted West Virginia will give McKinley and Roosevelt's election, at odds as great as 5 to 1. The progress of the campaign has been shown by the growth of the betting odds which started at 2 to 1 and now reach 5 to 1, and the outcome is indicated by the fact that there were more takers of the smaller odds. In the beginning some Bryanites had enough confidence in their winning to put up some money at odds of 2 to 1, but today, when the odds are more than double those figures, there is hardly a wager being made."

Secretary Root has promised to make a speech at a big republican meeting in Youngstown, Ohio, next Thursday. That is the only speech he intends to make during the campaign.

That the Bryanites are not honest in their claims of confidence is fully shown by their failure to accept the enormous amount of money that is being offered on McKinley and Roosevelt's election, at odds as great as 5 to 1. The progress of the campaign has been shown by the growth of the betting odds which started at 2 to 1 and now reach 5 to 1, and the outcome is indicated by the fact that there were more takers of the smaller odds. In the beginning some Bryanites had enough confidence in their winning to put up some money at odds of 2 to 1, but today, when the odds are more than double those figures, there is hardly a wager being made."

Secretary Hitchcock, who has been carefully studying the political situation, says he regards the President's re-election by a majority larger than he received four years ago, as now absolutely assured, and that Mr. Bryan's visit to New York did the republicans much good by showing how thoroughly he was controlled by Tammany, which is one of the largest trusts in the country. Of the outlook in Missouri, his own state, Mr. Hitchcock said: "From all that I can understand, the gold democrats will ignore Bryanism and vote the republican ticket. We will certainly gain one representative from Missouri, and possibly two, that is, if the people are allowed to vote the republican ticket; you know a law was passed in Missouri last year similar to the Goebel law in Kentucky, and it will not be the fault of the democratic election officials if many republican voters are not disfranchised. Notwithstanding, I believe Missouri will go republican next month."

THE PARAMOUNT ISSUE.

From Our Waukegan Correspondent.

The Kansas City convention decided to make imperialism the leading issue in the present political campaign.

With a flourish of trumpets, red fire and wind, they hoped to capture the crowd—it is a signal failure.

The good sense of the American people will not accept it; on the contrary the people believe that the paramount issue is a continuation of present satisfactory national conditions.

It is plainly in evidence everywhere that Bryan's hobbies do not alarm the voter; that Bryan's methods of reaching the White House will fail him by a large majority of the electoral college. And why not? When he says, that, "if elected I will at once call Congress together" * * *

What for? Is there any good reason for doing so at this time, and if not, why in March next? There is no demand on the part of any one, not even a democrat, nor by any set or class of people for this act. What does the statement mean other than a premeditated attempt to change the present prosperous and satisfactory conditions of the government and the people for something that is more than likely to result in disaster. There is not enough of his partisans in the country to give him a chance to do this act, the nearest he comes to any encouragement in this direction is from his ablest helper, "Tammany" Croker, of New York City—the city, that upon the adjournment of the 53rd congress (Cleveland's administration) shouted for joy. The fact that Mr. Bryan is found in such company and relies upon such aid as Mr. Croker can furnish from the slums, saloons and disreputable element of that great city, calls in question his honesty of purpose. The better class of the city of New York will not consent to it if their joy upon the adjournment of a democratic congress in '93 meant anything. They do not seek for any such times as they endured from '93 to '97, unless they have forgotten the occasion, Croker to the contrary, notwithstanding.

One cannot help remembering the riot in New York City during the rebellion when a thousand lives were lost and millions of property destroyed. It was called the "draft" riot; it was the same element that Croker has control of today, and Mr. Bryan, the honest patriot, is accepting this kind of assistance in his efforts to attain the president's chair. Verily, the ambition of man knows no bounds; no decency when his selfish interests are at stake. It is votes and power that counts with him, and all the issues, imperialism, 16 to 1 or anything that will help is the main thing.

But are the people to be blinded in that manner? The paramount issue with the working class is a continuation of national prosperity; a condition of peace in the industrial and commercial interests of the country; undisturbed, quiet and progression of all the people, their motto.

There is really no good reason to change present national conditions or government. Congress is competent to manage all the interests of the United States on a statesmanlike basis as it has in the past, and Mr. Bryan and his friends won't be hurt by the action.

The people cannot afford to try an experiment on the line of Mr. Bryan's argument. The Declaration of Independence will still be respected, also the constitution. There is no danger of trouble only as Mr. Bryan predicts, and his prophecies heretofore have proved to be false. The country will get along splendidly if he should be left to his theories and issues at Lincoln, Nebraska.

GETS A PATENT.

Henry Atwell, of Fox Lake, Inventor of a Clevis.

Henry Atwell, of Fox Lake, through his attorney P. L. Persons, has received a patent on a little device which may net him a great deal of money.

The patent was granted October 16th and is numbered 660,068.

The device is a clevis and is so arranged to attach to the end of a wagon tongue, or on a doubletree, singletree or whiffletree without a detachable pin or screw.

It is a simple contrivance, but is one of great use to farmers and which will save much labor in fastening on whiffletrees and its substantiability also makes it certain that it will be a "good thing."

A Thousand Tongues

Could not express the rapture of Annie E. Springer, of Philadelphia, when Dr. King's New Discovery cured her of a hacking cough that for many years had made life a burden. She says: "After all other remedies and doctors failed it soon removed the pain in my chest and I can now sleep soundly, something I can scarcely remember doing before. I feel like sounding its praises throughout the universe." Dr. King's New Discovery is guaranteed to cure all troubles of the Throat, Chest or Lungs. Price 50c and $1. Trial bottles free at all drug stores.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

The central committee of Galveston, Texas, has discovered that owing to the lack of system in the distribution of relief among the cyclone sufferers there has been much extravagance. Forged orders to the amount of $10,000 have turned up.

Captain A. B. S. Mosley, of Rome, Ga., who was several months ago appointed vice consul to Singapore, has decided to decline. Dr. R. A. Mosley, a brother of Captain Mosley, is consul general at Singapore, but has been ordered to Japan on account of his illness.

A romance for which the Paris exposition is said to be responsible is the engagement of Professor Woodward, assistant commissioner general for the United States, and Miss Marion Cockrell, adopted daughter of Thomas Walsh, the millionaire American mine owner.

Section hands saved the regular passenger train on the Bismarck, Washburn and Great Falls road, in North Dakota, from serious wreck. They discovered a pile of ties fastened to the rails at the entrance to a cut, in such a fashion that a disastrous wreck would have been inevitable. Tramps are suspected.

The First National Bank at Union, Ore., was robbed the other morning. Nitroglycerin was applied to the door of the vault. The shock blew open the doors and broken particles passed through the front of the building. The robbers fled on the approach of citizens who had sounded the alarm. The loss is about $3,000.

Harry Bettis and Daisy Blydenburg, prominent young people, were found dead locked in each other's arms, seated on a bench in Corry Park, at Corry, Pa. They were lovers, and it is supposed to have been a case of suicide. The girl was shot through the breast and the young man through the head. He still held the revolver in his hand with two chambers empty.

Three engines, a number of freight cars wrecked and a section of track torn up are the results of a collision near St. Mary's, Ohio, on the Lake Erie and Western road, caused by an open switch. The west-bound local freight was in switch when an east-bound double-header fast freight train came around a curve and crashed into it. No one was injured, the engine crews leaving.

After a honeymoon of four short weeks, Mrs. Rose Lashway of Weston, Ohio, made application for admittance to the county infirmary. Prior to her marriage to George Lashway Miss Hygeland had been employed as a domestic, saving nearly all her earnings. Lashway induced her to give him the money and then deserted her. Ill and being without home or friends, the deserted wife sought shelter in the county house.

The twelfth census, so far as the enumeration work in connection is completed, there were 58,000 enumerators and 207 supervisors. The cost of the enumeration will be about $4,200,000. Most of the enumerators have been paid. The factory work also is about finished. All of the special field agents in the manufacturing and industrial lines will complete their work and be paid off by Nov. 1. The cost of this work will be about $250,000. The entire force in the census bureau in Washington is now engaged in tabulating the statistics gathered. The report of the census bureau, when completed, will occupy eight volumes of 1,000 pages each. Although the work of the present census is heavier by several million inhabitants than ever before, Director Merriam thinks it will be ready for the public six weeks earlier than heretofore.

Sato, hitherto first secretary of the Japanese legation in Berlin, has been appointed Japanese minister to Mexico. He was formerly attached to the Japanese legation in Washington.

The will of the late Marquis of Bute has been admitted to probate. Among other charitable bequests the sum of £100,000 ($500,000) is distributed among various Roman Catholic causes.

"King Oscar's illness," says a dispatch to the London Daily Mail from Stockholm, "has developed into a serious inflammation of the lungs. The crown prince has been appointed regent."

IN GENERAL.

The bark Merom of San Francisco, owned by the Alaska Packers' Association, was driven ashore and totally wrecked on Kodiak Island in a gale. A sailor of the crew known as "Dutch Bill" remained on the vessel and went down with her.

Maj. Matt R. Peterson, the chief commissary of Cuba, died in Havana of yellow fever. Mrs. Peterson, his wife, who arrived recently from Cincinnati to nurse him, shot herself in the head with a revolver one hour after the major's death and died instantly.

Advices from Dawson say that steamers bring word that the United States telegraph system in the Yukon country will be completed from Nome to Tanana by Christmas. The line from Dawson, northward to Eagle on the Alaskan side will be completed a month hence.

H. H. Porter, a passenger on the steamship Lanza, reports that the cable steamer Orizaba, which was wrecked on Rocky Point reef, St. Michael Island, is a total loss. It was abandoned. The Orizaba was laying a government cable between St. Michael and Nome City.

The exploration party which went north on the steamer Corwin has returned to West Washington and reports the discovery of an immense field of coal near Sabine, on the arctic coast of Alaska. Coal is said to be so plentiful that it can be seen in great veins in the face of the cliffs.

The potato crop of the United States, according to Orange Judd Farmer's final report at the practical completion of harvest, approximates 230,000,000 bushels, or nearly 5,000,000 bushels less than last year, and is a fairly good yield compared with the average of the past ten years.

Extremes in climatic conditions were responsible for holding the crop within bounds. The average yield is eighty-three bushels an acre.

COAL STRIKE IS OVER.

OPERATORS ACCOGE TO THE DEMANDS OF MINERS.

Conference of Operators at Philadelphia Arrives at an Agreement—Will Abolish Sliding Scale of Wages and Give an Increase of Ten Per Cent.

The conference between the individual coal operators and the representatives of the big coal-carrying companies with a view to bringing about the termination of the anthracite coal strike was held in the private office of President Harris of the Reading Railway Company at Philadelphia. The meeting was secret. The conference resulted in an agreement to accede to the demands made by the mine workers' convention.

The Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company at once issued the following statement:

"It hereby withdraws the notice posted Oct. 3, 1900, and, to bring about practical uniformity in the advance of wages in the several coal regions, gives notice that it will suspend the operation of the sliding scale, with pay, 10 per cent advance on September wages till April 1, 1901, and thereafter until further notice; and will take up with its mine employees any grievances which they may have."

The Lehigh Valley company, in whose region the sliding scale is also in operation, will issue a similar notice. It will also be the individual operators who were represented at the meeting. This means the immediate ending of the strike.

KING LEOPOLD.

It is said that Leopold, the gay old King of the Belgians, will soon abdicate in favor of his nephew, Prince Albert of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha. Prince Albert is the son of the King's only brother, Prince Philippe, Count of Flanders, and he has renounced his right of succession, as he is old and deaf.

EIGHT PERISH IN THE FLAMES.

Terribly Fatal Fire in a New York Tenement House.

Eight persons were either burned or suffocated in a fire in the three-story frame double tenement house, 45 and 45 1/2 Hester street, New York, early Wednesday morning. Of Charles Fass' family of six, only himself and his 4-year-old girl, Pauline, are alive. Fass threw his child out of a second-story window and Policeman Peter Hunt caught her. Then Fass escaped. Mrs. Anna Horowitz met a horrible fate. Her night robe caught fire and she was burned to death on the fire escape in sight of the helpless crowd. Firemen and policemen made frantic efforts to save her, but the flames drove them back and she had to be left to her fate. Policeman Fitzgerald rescued two persons overcome by smoke.

The house in which the catastrophe occurred was a ramshackle frame building which for many years has been a landmark on the East Side.

KILL AND CAPTURE AMERICANS.

Detachment of the Twenty-fourth Regiment Overpowered by Filipinos.

A detachment of twenty men of the Twenty-fourth regiment, while engaged in repairing telegraph wires Oct. 10 at a point near San Jose, Nuevo Bella, province, Iloilo de Luzon, were set upon by 200 rebels and were overpowered and scattered. Seven of the Americans reached San Jose, but it is probable that the remainder were captured.

The enemy surprised a party of scouts of the Forty-third infantry at a point three miles from Tubbataha, Leyte island, killing three of the Americans at the first volley. Two escaped and gave the alarm, but the enemy succeeded in evading their pursuers. The native police of Tubbataha had conspired to surprise the Americans. The bodies of the dead soldiers were badly mutilated.

MARRIED AFTER FIFTY YEARS.

The culmination of a romance of fifty years' standing was witnessed in the county recorder's office at Kansas City, Mo., the other day when Sherman L. N. Foote, aged 72, and Mrs. Lizzie D. Baker, aged 68, were united in marriage. Mrs. Baker when a girl of 18 caught school in the East and among her pupils was L. N. Foote, a farmer four years her senior. The two fell in love and became engaged, but a quarrel separated them. Both eventually married other parties and lost track of each other. About three years ago Mrs. Baker's husband died and a year later Mr. Foote lost his wife. Then Mr. Foote learned the address of his sweetheart of long ago and opened up a correspondence with the result that they have been married at last.

HEAVY SENTENCE FOR A WHISKY SELLER.

At St. John, Kan., for selling whisky in violation of the prohibitory law, Olan Steinbrink has been fined $4,000 and sentenced to forty-nine months in jail. He cannot pay his fine and will, under the law, have to serve it out at the rate of 50 cents a day, making his total jail sentence practically thirty years. He was convicted on forty-nine counts.

A new electric motor for automobiles has been devised which restores energy to the storage battery when the vehicle is running down hill.

Some of the big election wagers are here compared. Never before, it is said, has there been so much money wagered upon an election. Wall street alone has put up $1,000,000, and $2,000,000 has found its way into stakeholders' hands in New York.

WILLIAM L. WILSON DEAD.

Former of Tariff Bill and Ex-Postmaster General Passes Away.

Gen. William L. Wilson, ex-Postmaster General, soldier, lawyer, educator, a member of five Congresses and author of the famous "Wilson bill," died suddenly at Lexington, Va., Wednesday. Gen. Wilson's death was unexpected and was a great shock to his townsmen. Mr. Wilson was one of the oldest men in Congress during his long service at Washington.

William Lyne Wilson was born

JOHN SHERMAN DEAD

VETERAN STATESMAN PASSES AWAY IN WASHINGTON.

Was Seventy-eight Years of Age, and for Forty-two of Those Years He Served the Republic in a Great Many High Places.

John Sherman, former Representative in the House, for a long term a member of the Senate and twice holding cabinet positions, died at his residence in Washington Monday morning, in the 78th year of his age. His death had been expected for some days and loving friends gave him their unflinching care and attention to the end. The immediate cause of death was described as brain exhaustion, incident to extreme weakness due to old age and to several attacks of sickness from which he had suffered for the last year and a half.

Mr. Sherman had not been in robust health for considerably over a year. In March, 1900, while on a pleasure trip to the French and Spanish West Indies in company with a relative, Frank Wiborg, he suffered a severe attack of pneumonia which almost proved fatal. The ship on which they were traveling touched at Santiago, from which place reports came to the United States that the well-known statesman had succumbed to the disease. He rallied, however, and the family accepted the offer of the United States government to bring him back to the United States on the cruiser Chicago, then in the vicinity of Santiago, and he was safely landed at Fort Monroe and brought to his home in Washington. Here he regained strength and was strong enough by summer time to visit his home in Ohio.

His remarkable vitality brought him through a relapse, which he suffered during the heated term, and by autumn he had again regained much of his strength and seemed to be in good spirits. He passed last winter at his home in Washington, enjoying fairly good health. The family went early in the summer to the old homestead at Mansfield, Ohio. They were there but a short time when Mrs. Sherman, who had been ill for a very long time, died. This was a severe blow to the secretary, from which he never fully recovered. He remained at Mansfield until the middle of September, when he returned to Washington. He was much broken in health and spirits, but for a time he was able to move about in the open air and to take short rides around the city. For the last three weeks or more, however, he had been confined to his bed.

AS STATESMAN AND POLITICIAN.

Twice in the Cabinet and Three Times Mentioned for President.

John Sherman was born in Lancaster, Ohio, May 10, 1823. When he was 9 years old his father died, leaving a widow and eleven children, with only the homestead and an income of $400 a year for support. The family was broken up, and most of the children went to live with relatives and friends. John remained with his mother. He went to school for a year or two, and in 1831 his father's cousin, John Sherman, a merchant of Mount Vernon, took him to his home and offered to prepare the boy for Kenyon College. He stayed there for four years, but at the end of that time gave up his school and began work as a roddman in the improvement then being made by the State in the Muskingum river.

In 1840 he went to Mansfield, where he made his home the remainder of his life, and began the study of law. He was admitted to the bar on his twenty-first birthday, and soon made a success. In 1848 he married Margaret Stewart. Mr. Sherman cast his first vote and made his first speech for Clay in 1844.

In 1848 he was a delegate to the Whig convention in Philadelphia which nominated President Taylor. Sherman was nominated and elected one of the secretaries, and took the stump. The fight over slavery had just been made an issue, and on this Sherman was nominated and elected to Congress. In 1856 he presided over the first Republican convention ever held in the State of Ohio.

Mr. Sherman made his first speech in Congress in 1850, and from that time on took a prominent part in the affairs of the House. His first financial speech was made in 1859. In 1860 he was re-elected, and again in 1860, and had every prospect of being elected Speaker, but resigned to go to the Senate in 1861 in place of Salmon P. Chase, who resigned to fill a place in Lincoln's cabinet. When the war came on Mr. Sherman went to Ohio to encourage enlistments, and for a time served as a volunteer without pay on the staff of Gen. Patterson.

The congressional problems of the next four years were banking and currency questions, and in the debates on these Mr. Sherman took a prominent part. During the stormy period of the reconstruction he acted as "peace-maker" between President Johnson and the Senate, but after the veto of the civil rights bill and other reconstruction measures he acted heartily with the majority of his party. Senator Sherman's greatest financial achievements were in connection with the resumption of specie payments in 1873. After a long fight he secured the passage of a bill providing for the resumption of specie payments on Jan. 1, 1875. As Secretary of the Treasury in the cabinet of President Hayes, Mr. Sherman was able to see the bill become a fact.

Mr. Sherman returned to the Senate at the end of his service as Secretary of the Treasury, and remained an active member of that body until he was called to fill the position of Secretary of State, the most important position in President McKinley's cabinet. This he resigned in April, 1898, on account of age and ill health, and since that time had taken little part in public affairs.

Secretary Sherman's death occurred in the handsome home on K street, which he had erected eight years ago. The secretary was a large holder of real estate in Washington, having invested extensively in that line from time to time. Conservative estimates of his wealth place it at a round million dollars, most of which is believed to consist of Washington real estate. Other investments consist of securities and it is stated that the old family home at Mansfield, Ohio, remained in his possession notwithstanding reports that he had disposed of it prior to his return to Washington.

Born May 10, 1823.—JOHN SHERMAN.—Died Oct. 22, 1900.

CABINET SHIES AT WEYLER.

Spanish Officials Resign as a Result of His Promotion.

Owing to the appointment of Gen. Weyler as captain general of Madrid, Spain, the cabinet of the interior, and Senor Cassel, minister of agriculture and public works, resigned, whereupon the entire cabinet tendered their resignations. The Queen Regent summoned Gen. Aznaraga, former minister of war, to form a new ministry.

The new war minister, Gen. Linares, appointed Gen. Weyler without consultation.

GENERAL WEYLER.

His colleagues. The captain generalship has hitherto been regarded as a political position. Gen. Linares, however, wished complete independence in military affairs, and selected Gen. Weyler because he deemed it necessary to have a man of energy in Madrid to cope with certain political demonstrations. The members of the cabinet and a majority of the press opposed the appointment as creating a sort of personal government. Prime Minister Silvela's efforts to keep the cabinet together having failed, he submitted their resignations.

CRAZY CRIMINALS IN REVOLT.

Attack Kept on at Matwean Hospital and Seven Escaped.

One of the most daring escapes in the annals of New York State occurred at the Matwean State hospital for insane criminals Sunday evening, when a large body of insane criminals made a dash for liberty. With crows, chairs and such other missiles as they could lay hands on, they overpowered the keepers, took from them the keys, and after unlocking doors, fought their way to the yard, overpowering keepers all along the line. Then they pulled down a heavy iron door, and scaling a high wall, endeavored to make their way to the outside world.

Seven of the madmen succeeded in making their escape, while the others were finally repulsed, after being beaten with clubs while scaling the walls. In the melee several of the keepers were injured, two very seriously. The men who got away are desperate, but the officials are confident that they will ultimately catch them.

Indemnity for Murdered Italians.

The President will recommend to Congress the payment of an indemnity to the families of the four Italians who were the victims of a mob at Tallulah, La., about two years ago. A report from a special agent of the Department of Justice clearly established the fact that the men were killed by the mob and that none of the perpetrators of the crime was ever punished by the State authorities, notwithstanding the representations of the national government. The Governor of Louisiana caused an investigation to be made, and there were some proceedings before a grand jury, but the result was that the national government found itself bound to make some sort of reparation in answer to the Italian government's representation, and they will take the form of an indemnity for each of the persons killed, who were Italian citizens at the time of their death.

The miners at Leavenworth, Kan., who have been on a strike for six weeks, have returned to work at 84 cents a ton, eight hours to constitute a day's work. This is a victory for the men.

A Cincinnati car crashed into a building loaded with women and children, throwing the vehicle into a gully and injuring every one, but none fatally.

Henry Floy of New York succeeded at St. Paul, Minn., in transmitting 30,200 volts of electricity through a cable three miles long.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

New York.—Although rates for money have shown little change this week, the tone of the market has been somewhat easier and fears of a stringency seem to have died out. The indications are that the height of the demand for currency for crop-moving purposes has been passed, and with gold flowing to New York in large volume from both the Klondike and Europe, the outlook appears favorable for another period of easy money before long. There has been some disturbance of loans on account of the rise in rates, but it has been less than in former years, and the effect on the situation as a whole has been inconsequential. The stock market has shown a more confident feeling. Trading throughout the week has been active and there has been an important change in sentiment. Out-lookers appear to be once more coming into the market. There have been some developments in the trade situation. Reports indicate that a good volume of business is moving, although it appears to be mostly for immediate delivery, and therefore of a hand-to-mouth character.

Chicago.—Most of the commodities speculatively dealt in on the Board of Trade show declines since last week. Oats was an exception, Friday's closing price being a high figure, secured in not included in the general statement that article being governed by exceptional circumstances that have no connection with the grain markets. The latter ruled extremely strong, chiefly because of much of this season's production having suffered serious deterioration in quality from the heavy rain that prevailed in the North-west after the grain was cut, thus diminishing the supply of the speculative grade. Decline in price of wheat was not due to any marked change in the general market surroundings, but to the gradual working out of previously existing conditions. Stocks in commercial grades kept increasing, and the rate of farmers' deliveries was not promising for any immediate amelioration of that discouragement to bull speculation.

Weather was favorable to an early movement of new corn, which is already being used largely for feeding in the territory of its growth. Speculation had already been driven out of the deliveries of corn for this and next month by the knowledge of a concentration in few hands of the available contract grade, and the improbability of much of the new crop being in condition to fill contracts for delivery this side of December. Market for hog products has been in even a worse condition than that of corn so far as concerned the manipulative tactics of the leaders in the trade. Daily fluctuations and general trend of the market have been largely independent of the usual governing influences, so that outsiders who made attempts at trading had to guess blindly at the intentions of this or that leader in the speculative market.

SIX KILLED IN A TORNADO.

A Texas Storm Carries Everything Before It.

A tornado struck about half a mile west of Lodi, Texas, Sunday evening. The path of the tornado was 200 yards wide and the wind swept everything before it. One house in the center of the storm, occupied by colored people, was destroyed, six persons being killed outright, and three others are missing who are supposed to be dead. The cyclone traveled from the southwest to the northwest, crossing the Texas and Pacific railroad at Campbellsville Spur, a lumber-loading station two miles north of Lodi. The lumber was carried in all directions. It is feared further loss of life has resulted out in the country.

Indians Starving to Death.

A report from Agassiz, B. C., says that 200 Indians are in a starving condition at Humboldt Meadows, 150 miles north of Agassiz. An Indian rider brought the news that the Indian families are dying and that it is doubtful if supplies can be sent to them quickly enough to save their lives. Supplies are being rushed from Vancouver to the relief of the starving Indians.

Watson Earwood, Columbus, Ohio, found dead with head crushed. Had been drinking.

FINDS YOUTSEY GUILTY.

Jury Assesses His Punishment at Imprisonment for Life.

At Georgetown, Ky., Henry B. Youtsey was found guilty by a jury of murdering William Goebel. His punishment is fixed at imprisonment for life. At the request of Youtsey's lawyers the judgment has been arrested until next February. By that time, if his mental condition has not improved, he will be tried for lunacy. In the meantime he is to be confined at Frankfort, and in the meantime, also, his attorneys will prepare an appeal.

Perhaps never before in Kentucky was an unconscious man tried for his life. Doubtless never before was a verdict returned against a man who at the very moment the decision was being read, lay in a stupor, more dead than alive, and with chances greatly against his recovery.

The court room was crowded, but none of Youtsey's attorneys were present. The prisoner's aged father and a number of other relations were in the sick room just off the court room. The verdict produced a beautiful scene, as they had been hoping that the result would be acquittal. Youtsey was somewhat better Saturday, though unable to make himself understood. He will be sentenced by Judge Cuntrell at the next term of court. A new trial will be asked for, and failing in this, an appeal will be taken.

CHRISTMAS BOXES TO GO FREE.

Gifts for Soldiers Serving Abroad to Be Carried Without Charge.

Christmas packages for American soldiers serving abroad will be transported by the government free of charge from either San Francisco or New York. This was done last year, and proved popular. Those in charge of the army transports, however, say that soldiers of boxes should understand that perishable articles, such as fruit and plum puddings, and fragile packages, such as preserves, should not be included.

Boxes should not exceed twenty-five or thirty pounds in weight. They should be plainly marked with the name, company and regiment of the soldier, and be sent in care of the superintendent of the United States army transport service, either at San Francisco or New York. A transport leaves New York for the Philippines on Nov. 25, and will take Christmas packages, but it will require fifty days to make the trip, whereas the passage across the Pacific is shorter. Express or freight charges should be prepaid to San Francisco or New York. Packages for soldiers in Cuba and Porto Rico should be sent via New York.

FORCING THE ISSUE.

The proclamation of peace in South Africa is still to be promulgated. The war is apparently ended as far as regular campaigning is concerned, but small bands of Boers continue to harass the British troops. Railroad communication is frequently interrupted by the destruction of the roads by Boer raiders, and telegraph wires are often cut. Of course, this is not war, but it is as near to it as Lord Roberts' army still has plenty to do. Lord Roberts' departure for England is also delayed. A week ago it was expected that Lord Roberts would succeed Lord Wolseley as commander-in-chief of the British army. During the week, however, new complications seem to have arisen. Sir Buller's Buller, who had been slated for the chief command in South Africa, is preparing to go to England, and the London newspapers print, under reservation, the story that he is to be the new commander-in-chief. Lord Roberts, it being stated, having declined because the War Department refused to give him a free hand in instituting army reforms.

The affairs of the Ottoman empire are rapidly going from bad to worse, and it is evident that a crisis cannot long be deferred. During the week the Turkish legation at Madrid was closed, the ambassador discharging his secretaries, and his servants and his family were being sent to Constantinople. The Turkish flag is coming down from many European consulates. The most prominent and progressive Turks are fugitives in Europe, fearing the wrath of the Sultan, Osman Pasha, a relative of the dead general of that name escaping during the last week. Turkey is making no progress in commerce, industry, agriculture or mining. The land taxes are so heavy that the farmers cannot pay them from the products of the soil. The mines of coal, copper, iron, lead, silver, salt and alum are unworked because of restrictive laws. Europe's day of settlement with the Sultan cannot long be delayed, and when that day comes the Sultan will disappear as a disturbing factor in old world politics.

China has taken the initiative in opening negotiations with the powers for a settlement of the complications arising from the Boxer revolt. Prince Ching and Li-Hung-Chang have addressed to the foreign envoys a circular note suggesting a basis for the beginning of negotiations. They express regret for the anti-foreign outrages and concede in advance China's liability to pay indemnity. They ask cessation of hostilities and the withdrawal of the allied army. France has already rejected the proposals, and the powers will doubtless follow the example. In his note Mr. Pineau, the French ambassador, insists that all negotiations will be held in abeyance as long as the heads of the leaders of the anti-foreign revolt remain untried. This is a direct return to the original demands of Germany and may delay negotiations.

The health of King Oscar of Sweden has given great uneasiness to his people during the last week, although the latest advices are encouraging. At the same time the crown prince, Gustavus, will take the oath before the Storting and govern as regent. It is feared that King Oscar will never be fully restored to health, and his death is confidently expected within a short time. In the present strained relations between Sweden and Norway the death of King Oscar and the accession of Prince Gustavus would be almost an international calamity.

AROUND A BIG STATE

BRIEF COMPILATION OF ILLINOIS NEWS.

Corporations Fined Under Trust Law.—Good Haul by Baggage-Room Thief at Joliet.—College for Cumberland Presbyterians.

By agreement the Sangamon County Circuit Court rendered judgment for $50 each and costs against the Springfield Co-operative Coal Company and the Alton-Caskey-Holcomb Company. These two companies failed to comply with the anti-trust laws of the State, not making the proper affidavits of non-membership and non-participation in any trust or combination. The suits were brought in August, 1899, by the people on relation of Attorney General Akin.

Baggage Thief Makes Haul.—Detectives are searching for one of the shrewdest thieves who ever operated in Joliet. By secretly changing the brass checks on some baggage in the Chicago and Rock Island baggage room some unknown crook succeeded in securing a valuable belonging to J. J. Smith of Chicago, traveling salesman for a wholesale dentist house. In the valise was about $400 worth of gold and silver in granulated form for dentists' use, life insurance policies for $11,000 with a large paid-up value and a check for $300. There is no clue to the thief.

Offers Cash to a College.

James Milliken of Decatur has been offered about his offer of $200,000 and sixteen acres of land for an industrial college has been formally accepted by the Cumberland Presbyterian synod of Illinois. The offer is conditioned on Decatur's raising $40,000 and the Illinois synod a similar amount.

Flees from Hospital and Snatches.

In Galesburg Adolph Victor Gustafson, a typhoid fever patient, escaped from the hospital. The next morning his body was found hanging to a fence post. He had procured a passing cord, and by doubling up his knees had strangled himself. He had been married but four months.

Quarry Owner Killed by Train.

Ignatz Zengel, one of the pioneer quarriers of the West and owner of large quarries near Quincy, was killed by the cars there. He was walking on the track and stepped aside to let a train go by, was met by another one going in the opposite direction and was instantly killed.

Killed Himself to Avoid Arrest.

While two officers were at the door of his home with a warrant for his arrest on a charge of stabbing Gus Swenson of Moline, Charles Holstrom, aged 32, of Rock Island, fired two shots from a revolver into his breast. He died two hours later.

The warehouse and the storeroom of F. P. Watson & Bro., at Mount Vernon, with all their contents, were destroyed by fire. The loss is $25,000; insurance about $12,000.

Kankakee police refused to allow the funeral to be held in church because the 3-year-old son of Robert Ostrowsky had died of diphtheria. Several children have died of diphtheria there.

James Butcher and Benjamin Hutton, neighbors, residing in Shelby County, were adjudged insane and sent to the asylum. Both men lost their reason through religious excitement.

The Warsaw Bulletin says that John Farwell, aged 90 years, who died at his home in Schuyler County a few days ago, owned 20,000 acres of good farm lands, lying largely in Fulton County.

Women and animals joined in a panic at the Lincoln Park zoo in Chicago the other day when a dog, tossed on top of the cages by the elephant, was torn to pieces and devoured by two tigers.

David Godden, an employee of Alfred Mapes, a well-to-do Edgar County farmer, disappeared Oct. 6; so did a valuable horse and buggy of Mapes. Godden was finally captured at Lawrenceville, but the stolen property could not be found. The accused would have been released had he not weakened and exacted a promise from his captors to be driven to Vincennes to bid his sweetheart farewell if he made complete confession. The drive was made and the lovers kissed each other, good-bye in the presence of the girl's family. Then Godden revealed the whereabouts of the rig and it was recovered.

Mrs. J. H. Lane, wife of a Hanna City farmer, is prosecuting her husband on the charge of wife abandonment, and Lane's only defense is the claim that Mrs. Lane ate too much. While not definitely stating the limits of his wife's abnormal appetite, Lane says he could not raise enough on his farm to feed her. Growing desperate, he forced her to sign away her rights to their property, gave her $50 and told her to leave. The wife is a simple-minded creature and she obeyed. But when the money was gone and starvation stared her in the face, she had Lane arrested. Lane was bound over to the grand jury.

Charles Harder, a plausible young man, arrived at Belleville and set on foot a gigantic enterprise to raise flowers by electricity. He convinced many of the merchants that he was sincere and car loads of lumber were hauled to the scene of his modern greenhouse, which was to hatch blossoms in a jiffy at great profit. On a certain night Harder promised to settle for the land, material and wages. He did not appear. The creditors became suspicious and the material was hauled away by the owners. The lumber merchant who stood for the material has the incomplete hothouse on his hands and the police are trying to locate Harder.

Henry Robinson was killed and Frank Robinson, his brother, was seriously injured in a runaway accident at Pana. The brothers were wealthy farmers. A boy who accompanied the men was also thrown from the carriage, but escaped unhurt.

Adm. Maesch was shot in the back by two men who had first knocked him down with a club as he was passing the alley between Robey street and North Secley avenue, Chicago. He was formerly a union man, but had gone to work with men who did not belong to the organization.

ABUSE OF THE FRANKING PRIVILEGE.

Every four years the country is flooded with public documents franked through the mails for political purposes. Is it not about time that this abuse of the franking privilege by public men was stopped, and the hundreds of tons of this stuff and political rot that pay read and no one wants, was made to pay postage and relieve the people from the burden of postage on the things they read and want? If the abuse stopped at free circulation through the mails but little cause of complaint would exist, but it does not end here, as hundreds of men are kept busy year in and year out turning out tons of the drivel of some hair-brained statesman who talks to the galleries for effect, knowing that the Government Printing office will print his "spiel" and that he can frank it to his admiring constituents and retain his job, as we all like to be jolled. In each instance however, the dear public pays the freight.

Dick Croker, Jr., threatens to have as demoralizing an effect upon college life at Cornell University, where he has entered as a student, as his dad had upon New York City politics. As his college outfit he has two bulldogs that cost $10,000, a stable of thoroughbred horses and a full line of vehicles, which will take him daily to and from the country seat he has set up near the college, and forty miles of clothes which his valet informs the world cost from $50 to $100 each. Yet Croker senior's only occupation is bossing Tammany Hall, which controls the patronage of New York City.

According to a postal card poll of ten representative districts in greater New York, taken by the Herald, instead of Boss Croker, carrying the big city by 100,000 majority, as he claims he will, it will go for McKinley by a small majority. The poll showed that gold democrats and first voters are almost entirely supporting McKinley.

Vice Chairman Payne, of the republican national committee, estimates that 207 electoral votes are now certain for McKinley, 115 for Bryan and 24 in doubt with chances in favor of going to Bryan, while 38 are in doubt with chances about even as to which gets them. That is a very conservative estimate.

If senator Wellington's thoughts were right, and he backed them with his money he could win a fortune. He claims to think that Maryland will go for Bryan, and there are barrels of good money waiting to be covered that says the state will go for McKinley and Roosevelt.

It is barely possible that the reported new rebellion in south China may owe its origin to Europe land-grabbing schemes. Count Waldersee, commander of the allied army, which now has no American troops, has shown a restless anxiety to fight ever since he reached China.

Bryanites explain ex-Senator Gorman's failure to actively participate in the campaign by saying that his health has broken down. Those who know Mr. Gorman best say that it isn't his health, but his confidence which has broken down.

It begins to look as though there would be a slight hitch in Mr. Bryan's scheme to get elected to the Senate for Nebraska, owing to the election of a republican legislature in the state.

The Ohio republican managers are figuring on a majority of from 60,000 to 75,000, they say that "Golden Rule" Jones will not be an important factor in the result.

Instead of the dollar dinner he got in that city four years ago, Tammany gave Mr. Bryan a gorgeous and costly banquet, with $40,000 worth of fireworks for side trimmings.

Chairman Babcock, of the republican congressional committee, says the prospects for the election of a good working republican majority of the House grow brighter every day.

In Kansas the populist campaign has practically collapsed, which adds materially to the certainty of the sunflower state resuming its old place in the republican column.

The latest figures, based on the registration, indicate that McKinley and Roosevelt will get 140,000 majority in New York, outside of New York city.

The betting odds in New York have been pushed up another notch, and are now 4 to 1 in favor of McKinley, and Bryan money is still hard to find.

It is the enthusiasm he has aroused that makes the Bryanites abuse Governor Roosevelt. They hate him for the republican votes he has made.

Mr. Bryan has been one of the most effective McKinley stumpers; his speeches have aroused the republicans and made victory a certainty.

Hon. W. S. Forman, a former democratic member of Congress from Illinois, is doing good work on the stump for McKinley and Roosevelt.

Who controls the territory of China is unimportant to us so long as our trade rights are unrestricted.

Mr. Stevenson's faked quotation from Lincoln was a decidedly destructive boomerang.

Mr. Bryan's eastern trip will add largely to the republican majority in that section.

Woman's Indirect Influence.

In the description of "Teddy" Roosevelt's recent triumphal progress through South Dakota, the papers report that, among other demonstrations of enthusiasm, "Huron turned out a troop of women riders. They were the daughters of the leading Republicans of the town, and were rough in their riding only." Nobody suggests that these ladies were out of their sphere riding in the midst of a howling throng of cowboys, whose enthusiasm for the candidate went even to the length of lassoing with their lariats the smokestack of the engine that drew his train. No; for the women were only exerting their "indirect influence." But if the same women were shown their political preferences by going quietly on foot to the polls and dropping a slip of paper into the ballot-box, they would have lost all their feminine refinement.—Woman's Journal.

More Justice and Less Sentiment.

In recent speech Mr. Bryan said: "When an American boy dies for liberty his mother thanks God that she gave her strength to bear and rear a son for such noble sacrifice, but what American mothers want to raise boys at so much per head?" What American mothers want is the right to an equal voice with men in deciding whether there shall be war. No mother ever thanked God for the privilege of raising sons to be shot. No mother would willingly bear and rear sons if she knew they were to be sacrificed in battle. But if war must come, and perhaps in our present stage of evolution they are sometimes unavoidable, then women demand the right to some authority in the commissary department and the hospitals and to some representation among the physicians and nurses. Women are in rebellion against having to remain silent and passive in all the preliminary stages which lead up to a declaration of war. They are sick unto death of the endless twaddle about the blessed privilege of being allowed to lay the fathers, husbands and sons on the altar of their country. They are tired of a life of spinsterhood because the young men fill soldiers' graves, desperately tired of remaining at home alone, doing the work of both man and woman, raising the fatherless children and paying war taxes without any representation in government. Women are getting very tired of a great many things, and of nothing so much as being fed on sentiment when they are starving for justice.

Bobbed the Grave.

A startling incident is narrated by John Oliver of Philadelphia, as follows: "I was in an awful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite, growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Then I was advised to use Electric Bitters; to my great joy, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50c, guaranteed, at all drug stores.

Garden Vegetables.

I am prepared to supply onions to all at 50 cents per bush. Also squash and cabbage for sale. Leave orders at Webb Bros., Antioch, Lake Villa stores and F. D. Battershall, Grayslake, or address F. W. Taylor, Grayslake, Ill.

MARRIED THURSDAY.

Well Known Millbrae Young Lady Weds Bloomington Man.

At the home of the bride's parents at the Glenview farm, Millbrae, on Thursday, Oct. 18th at 1:30 p. m., occurred the marriage of Jennie Christian Thom, to John Neikirk, of Bloomington, Ill. At the appointed hour to the strain of the wedding march rendered by Mrs. Jessie Thom, the bride and groom entered the parlors unattended, where Rev. Sheldon Harris, of Dwight, Ill., performed the ceremony in the presence of the gathering friends.

After the usual greetings and congratulations, refreshments were served in the dining room. A pleasant hour followed in the parlor in conversation and music. The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Thom. She has lived near Millbrae nearly all her life and is much loved and respected by all her friends.

Mr. Neikirk is a graduate of the State University. He is employed by the Alton & St. Louis Railroad as mechanical engineer. Mr. and Mrs. Neikirk will locate at Bloomington, Ill., where they will be at home at 1006 N. West street, after Dec. 1.

The guests present were: Mr. and Mrs. William Thom; Sr., Mr. and Mrs. William Thom, Jr., James and Edwin Thom, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Stephens and Miss Hughes, all of Millbrae. Those from out of town: Rev. and Mrs. Sheldon Harris, of Dwight, Ill., Miss Stewart, Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Hutchinson, and Miss Stephens, of Waukegan.

IN A NIGHT BATTLE.

Town of Salem Is Greatly Excited Over Burglary.

So numerous have robberies been recently in the village of Salem, near here, that its residents determined upon active measures to prevent their repetition. Besides a system of patrols, burglar alarms have been put into almost every store connected with the proprietor's residence.

Early this morning the business place of H. B. Gardner was entered, the alarm being sounded in Gardner's house. He immediately summoned some of his neighbors, and arming themselves they went to capture the marauders.

Just as the party came in sight of the store the burglars came out, and the guns of the citizens were emptied at them. The desperados returned the fire and for some distance a running fight was kept up.

One of the robbers was wounded, but his companion managed to carry him to the wagon they had waiting, in which they made their escape, though closely pursued.

The police are on the trail of the men and it is thought they will shortly be captured.—Kenosha Telegraph-Courier.

Job Couldn't Have Stood It

Mrs. Waypup—"I thought the wedding music magnificent. A throbbing note of triumph, of ineffable joy, seemed to run through it, as though the organist were inspired."

Mrs. Nowitt—"The organist was inspired, no doubt. He was the bride's first husband, and now he doesn't have to pay alimony any more."

Dr. W. H. Lewis, Lawrenceville, Va., writes, "I am using Kodol Dyspepsia Cure in my practice among severe cases of indigestion and find it an admirable remedy." Many hundreds of physicians depend upon the use of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure in stomach troubles. It digests what you eat, and allows you to eat all the good food you need, providing you do not overload your stomach. Gives instant relief and a permanent cure. W. T. Hill.

Journalist—"Queer saying, that about truth lying at the bottom of the well."

Lawyer—"You wouldn't think so if you knew the amount of pumping we lawyers have to do to get at it."

Free to Inventors.

The experience of C. A. Snow & Co. in obtaining more than 20,000 patents for inventors has enabled them to helpfully answer many questions relating to the protection of intellectual property. This they have done in a pamphlet treating briefly of United States and foreign patents, with cost of same, and how to procure them; trade marks, designs, caveats, infringements, decisions in leading patent cases. This pamphlet will be sent free to anyone writing to C. A. Snow & Co., Washington, D. C.

Highway Robbery.

George Phelps, the driver of the J. W. Fairbanks tea and coffee wagon, was attacked by three highwaymen near Harvard on Tuesday evening and forced to give up considerable cash. He was sailing over the ground peacefully and serenely when all of a sudden his craft came to a dead stop. Looking up he found a strange man had charge of his horses, while a man with a big Krupp gun stood at the glass door at either side of the wagon inviting him to come out. George had his nerve with him and wouldn't surrender. The robbers then smashed the glass in the doors, and pulling George out, took all the money he had then ordered him to make tracks for home. He got into the wagon and came to town, reporting the robbery of the store. No clue to the robbers has been obtained.—Woodstock Democrat.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy. It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century, discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid, rheumatism and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer. In this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Blinghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.

LITERARY NOTES.

New fun may now be poked at the Comstockian ladies and gentlemen who decided that graceful Madame le Bacchant, introduced to Boston's upperboudoir by her father, Frederick MacMonnies, was not in sufficient good form (?) to gambol in public places. In the statutory court, grand palace of fine arts, Paris exposition, behind her serene ladyship, bunch of grapes, baby, beautiful smile and all, in such excellent company as Victor Hugo, Tecumseh Sherman, George Washington and others good and great. Do any of the self-appointed gossips of purity hurry past with a cold stare? So be it. So much more room left for the rest of U. S. to lay at her joyous feet the homage which is due her.—From The National Magazine for October.

W. L. Taylor, who makes the finest pictures that appear in The Ladies' Home Journal, leads the ideal life that every artist dreams of. He neither seeks or accepts work from any one. He has an agreed income from the Philadelphia magazine, and as this is a generous amount he has nothing in the way of finances to worry him. He lives in an artistic home at Willsley, Massachusetts, in the top story of which he has his studio. His work is carefully laid out for him by his editor for an entire year in advance, and he works at it only when he feels at his best. Otherwise, he paddles in his canoe or walks. He has no time imposed upon him when his work shall be turned in. He generally uses up the best of two months to paint a single picture. Few artists have really a more ideal life.

PREACHER SCORES WAUKEGAN: Arraigns City Officials and Says That Vice Is Rampant.

Of late Waukegan has become a wide-open town, with saloons and theatres running on Sundays, with gambling and other objectionable features prevalent. Pulpit and press alike have been silent about the growth and vice and the lax enforcement of the law. Tonight the Rev. W. C. Thomas preached a strong sermon in the Christian church, arraigning the city officials and calling for reform.

Under the title "What is the Matter with Waukegan?" Mr. Thomas spoke about the growth and of injurious and unlawful practices and amusements here, the wide-open policy of the saloons, the selling of liquor to minors, and the fact that the mayor and city officials did not attempt to control these matters, despite their oaths to enforce the laws.

Said he: "The moral status of the city is low, but is there not enough of it to support the officers in enforcing the laws? What is the good of officers who violate their oaths, or of laws which are not enforced? The pulpit must needs take a firm and open stand in the matter. There should be a united pulpit and press for the observance of law and the protection of the home and children."

This is the season when mothers are alarmed on account of croup. It is quickly cured by One Minute Cough Cure, which children like to take. W. T. Hill.

DWIGHT W. ANDREWS DEAD.

Former Chief Grain Inspector Expires Saturday at Sylvan Beach Hotel.

Dwight W. Andrews, for the past two years senior partner in the management of Sylvan Beach Hotel, at Channel Lake, died about 11:30 Saturday morning from the effect of a paralytic stroke suffered Monday morning previous, mention of which was made in these columns last week. During his lifetime Mr. Andrews had been a power in democratic politics and had served on the Board of Equalization, also served as chairman of the State Central Committee, was at one time the democratic nominee for Congress in his district and later held the responsible position of Chief Grain Inspector under Governor Altgeld.

Since coming to Antioch some two years ago, Mr. Andrews did not take an active interest in local or state politics, but gave his undivided time and attention to his hotel interests in which he was remarkably successful, having succeeded in building up a good summer patronage and retaining the good will and esteem of those with whom he came in contact. As the straight forward man of business, the genial friend and obliging neighbor, the people of this place prefer to remember him, and from a somewhat intimate personal acquaintance with him, the writer can testify to his mental and moral worth and will ever retain pleasing memories of Dwight W. Andrews. The remains were taken to his old home at Centralia, Ill., for burial.

The wife, three daughters and three sons survive, to whom THE NEWS would extend a word of comfort and cheer in their lonely hours.

Feelings of safety pervade the household that uses One Minute Cough Cure, the only harmless remedy that produces immediate results. It is infallible for coughs, colds, croup and all throat and lung troubles. It will prevent consumption. W. T. Hill.

Why a Minister Gave Up Preaching. A minister had his salary cut down one hundred dollars, a year or so ago (and this was in a western church), because his wife wore a handsome gown than some of the prominent women in the congregation. The reason was given openly, and the matter found its way into public print. The fact that the wife's wealthy aunt was the donor seemed to be of no consequence, and the poor woman herself, irritated and mortified at the publicity given to her private affairs, succeeded in persuading her husband to withdraw from the ministry.—"A Minister's Wife," in the October Ladies' Home Journal.

New Grand Opera in Embryo.
Camille Saint-Saens, according to Le Guide Musical, is thinking of writing a new grand opera. He takes with him to La Palmas in Majorca a libretto by Victorien Sardou and M. Gheusi.

Northern Wisconsin Railroad Lands are increasing in value from year to year.
Railroads are the great civilizers, for they give the settler as well as the manufacturer equal opportunity to work in undeveloped fields, thereby rapidly settling the country and bringing forth its undiscovered riches.

Northern Wisconsin is rich in iron ore, clay, kaolin, marl, timber and fine farm lands. It has made many a settler independent and added to the wealth of manufacturers who have sought this territory.
Opportunities have not passed, as there is still a generous supply of land which can be obtained at low figures and on easy terms.

Wealthy European Musician.
Sir Arthur Sullivan is one of the wealthiest musicians in Europe. From the Savoy opera he still draws a princely income, and many of his songs continue to provide him with over welcome checks every quarter.

As a man of business he has few equals, and the directors of the Crystal Palace and those of the Savoy hotel know well his mathematical ability and his shrewdness.

Devil Worship in Korea.
It is said that Korans are a handsomer race than either the Japanese or Chinese, and at one time were far ahead of both of them in civilization.

Devil worship of the most abject order is the secret of Korean decadence.

Superstition and fear of countless evil spirits, with the faint hope of propiti-ating a small minority of kindly demons, must be held accountable for the degeneration of the people whom nature did not fail to qualify for a splendid destiny. Buddhism and Confucianism have both been overthrown by Shamanism, the keynote of which is always sorcery. Wizards and witch doctors are the real rulers of Korea.

The pen in the hand is worth two in the mind.

If you have "a good mind to write to Dr. Pierce" take pen in hand and begin. Then you'll avoid the experience of Mrs. M. P.
Davis, of Honaker, Russell Co.,
Va. She writes:

"For seven years I was confined to bed most of the time. I had ulceration of internal organs and female weakness.
I had four doctors and they said I could not be cured. After the doctors said
I could not be cured I wrote to Doctor Pierce for advice. I followed the advice he gave. I feel better than I ever did. My friends say I do not look like the same woman. I am sorry I did not take Dr. Pierce's medicine when I first began to have poor health. I could have saved what I paid to humbugs."

No one ever regretted writing to Dr. Pierce for advice. Many have regretted not writing sooner.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free, and so obtain the opinion and advice of a specialist in diseases peculiar to women. All correspondence private. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce,
Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser, 1008 pages, is sent free on receipt of stamps to defray expense of mailing only. Send 21 one-cent stamps for paper covers, or 31 stamps for cloth. Address as above.

That "Unlucky" Day.
The ill-repute of Friday as an unlucky day is shown by some current statistics to be undeserved. A careful investigation, largely through official channels, has been made of the matter in Germany, and as a result it is found that of 9,948 weekly accidents and disasters, such as are commonly attributed to bad luck, 1,674 occurred on Monday, 1,551 on Tuesday, 1,631 on Wednesday, 1,547 on Thursday, 1,638 on Friday, 1,638 on Saturday and 269 on Sunday.—Cleveland Leader.

The Wisconsin Central Railway was one of the first roads to penetrate the vast Northern Wisconsin wilderness which stretches across the state from east to west.
It also has developed from year to year and today offers the best of transportation facilities, enabling all to ship the products of that section to any market in the world.

RAPIDLY DEVELOPING
NORTHERN WISCONSIN

The settler and manufacturer who have located in the northern portion of the Badger State are developing and improving that immense tract of rich country very rapidly. Tilers of the soil are coming in and new factories are going up.
There is reason for this. The quality and quantity of iron ore, clay, kaolin, marl and timber lands the secret. Nature yields its riches to those who till. Opportunities are still plentiful, for much of the rich undeveloped land is awaiting the settler and manufacturer. It can be obtained on easy terms and at low figures.

The Wisconsin Central Ry
the pioneer road of the northern section of Wisconsin, affords cheap and excellent transportation facilities, thus opening the markets of the entire country to the products of that section.
Those interested can obtain free illustrated pamphlets and maps upon application to

Wedded for Gold

BY BERTHA N. CLAY

CHAPTER XXIV.—(Continued.)

"My lady," he said, "I beg your pardon. I must make bold enough to ask you to interfere. Sir Owen—he will go out riding this morning. That is all good and fair, my lady; but he will ride the new hunter Plantagenet, and he is no more fit for it than a child."

"You had better tell him so, Martin," replied Lady Chevenix.

"My lady, I have told him, over and over again. The more I tell him, the more he will go."

Lady Chevenix looked helplessly at Felix.

"Mr. Lonsdale," she said, "will you go and try to persuade Sir Owen not to ride that horse? It is a highly mettled animal, and he has never ridden it yet."

He might as well have appealed to a rock. All that he said Sir Owen laughed to scorn.

"Something happen to me?" he cried.

"Yes, I know what it will be. I shall come home cured of the blues! I am going to gallop dull care away, and Plantagenet shall help me."

With a heavy heart Lady Chevenix entered the house, and Felix went back to his writing. Violet retired to her own room, to while the time away with a book.

The sunny hours of the beautiful day wore on; no cloud came over the smiling heavens; yet there was a faint wall in the summer wind which to the weather-wise heralded a storm. The shadows lengthened, and Felix had not left the library. He had completely finished by six o'clock, and on going in search of Sir Owen was told that he had not yet returned. Lady Chevenix was in her room. He would have been glad if he could have gone home then; he did not care to remain for the long formal dinner and the long formal evening. Still he was unwilling to leave Lady Chevenix until her husband returned.

The first bell rang, and he went to his room. Sir Owen, he was told, had not returned, and her ladyship seemed anxious about him. After a little while Felix went into the drawing room, where Lady Chevenix sat, dressed for dinner, looking superbly beautiful in a dinner dress of blue velvet and a suite of pearls. She turned to him anxiously.

"Sir Owen has not returned," she said.

"I have told them to keep back the dinner until he comes."

He saw that she was terribly anxious, and did his best to cheer her. Seven o'clock struck, and then half-past, and Felix persuaded Lady Chevenix to take some dinner. They sat alone at the state dining table, where the silver plate and the rich cut glass looked so brilliant—the table where Lady Chevenix had undergone so many humiliations. It was but a farce; neither of them could eat.

Eight o'clock chimed, and no other sound broke the summer silence.

"I cannot sit here any longer doing nothing," said Lady Chevenix. "I am quite sure now that something has happened."

Her words were prophetically true. Even as she spoke they heard a confused noise at the grand entrance hall—the rush of many feet, the cries of women and the deep voices of men.

Felix never forgot Violet. She rose from her seat, and stood hesitating for one moment, pale as death. Then she turned to the door. But Felix was before her.

"Sit down, Lady Chevenix," he said. "You must not go out there. Let me see what is wrong."

He placed her in a chair and then opened the door. There was a rush of terrified servants, and women's voices cried: "Oh, my lady—oh, my lady!"

A crowd of men stood round a litter, and on the litter lay Sir Owen. Felix pushed them aside.

"Is he dead?" he asked; and the answer was "No."

"Thank heaven for that!" he cried. Then he uttered a little cry of dismay, for Lady Chevenix stood by his side.

"What has happened?" he said. "Tell me the worst."

"Sir Owen has been thrown from his horse; and Martin says the horse fell on him!" cried a dozen voices.

They carried the baronet into a spacious, handsomely furnished bedroom. The curtains were drawn and the lamps lighted. They laid him on the bed of down, and the faithful servants wept over him.

Lady Chevenix went up to her husband and knelt down by his side. She had never professed any love for him; but, as he lay there, white, silent and helpless, a keen sense of pity and compassion for him awoke in her heart. She took his hands in her own and rubbed them.

"Owen," she said—"my dear, try to speak to me."

He looked up.

"Why did you let me be tortured with doctors?" he cried. "I heard the servants. They say—oh, listen, Violet—they say that I am going to die!"

He uttered the last word with a scream they never forgot.

"It is all nonsense," he continued. "My back is hurt with the fall—that is all; it is nothing more—nothing more. I assure you, Lonsdale, send for your father. I want to see him; he has always been kind to me, in his way. He will see at once there is nothing the matter; send for him."

Felix left the room at once, and sent Martin off for his father. He went back to the room and found Violet, kneeling by her husband's side. Her head, with the golden hair all unfastened, was on the pillow, and she was trying to reason with him.

CHAPTER XXV.

Long months had passed since Sir Owen was laid in his grave; and now August was come round again, with its ripe fruits and yellow corn. Lady Chevenix, everyone agreed, was a model widow. During the interval that had elapsed since her husband's death, hardly anyone had seen her. Visitors had called, but had never been admitted; they had left cards and condolences, and had each approved of the fact that Lady Chevenix kept herself quite secluded.

One day Lord Arlington found it necessary to see Lady Chevenix on business; he was accompanied by Capt. Hill. She received them with quiet grace, and listened with intelligence to all their business statements; then she said it was her express wish that Darcy Lonsdale should continue to act in every way for her, but, as he would have more to do, she insisted on doubling the salary Sir Owen had paid him. Lord Arlington was very pleased about it, and the interview ended satisfactorily.

In three weeks after that conversation Lady Chevenix left Garswood to spend some months in picturesque Normandy.

All Loomshire was shaken to its very center. Such news had not been heard in the neighborhood for years; there was a general sentiment of rejoicing. Lady Maude Arlington was going to be married—Lady Maude, whom all the inhabitants of the county looked upon as a princess. Whom was she going to marry? That was the question everyone asked. And the answer gave universal pleasure. It was the hero of the Victoria Cross—Major Rayson. Everyone was delighted with the alliance. Lady Maude was so beloved; while the name of Major Rayson was known wherever bravery or valor was honored.

Knowing Miss Lester's secret predilection for hearing news that she was too proud to seek, Felix went over to Outlands a few days afterward. He had not seen Eve lately, and was anxious about her. He had heard Kate say that she was not looking well; that she had grown thin and pale. Finding one evening that he had an hour's leisure, he thought that he could not do better than devote it to her.

Miss Lester was looking a little more cross and impatient than usual when the young lawyer greeted her.

"Tell me all about Lady Maude's marriage," she said. "It is not often that one has the opportunity of hearing about such grand affairs."

"I came on purpose to do so," said Felix. "I thought you would be pleased to hear about it."

She was delighted and would have listened to him for another hour, but that her keen eyes detected a daisy maid enjoying the homage paid by one of the reapers.

"Go into the house and find Eve," she said. "I shall be with you directly."

Felix found Eve in the garden; and so intently was the girl thinking that she never heard his footsteps until he stood by her side.

"My dear Eve," he said, "are we such strangers that you should be so startled by my presence? The madre told me you were not looking so well, and I am come to see."

"I am quite well," she answered, in her sweet, low voice; "and very pleased to see you."

"You look well enough just now. You have the color of a rose in your face," he told her. "May I find a seat here? I have an hour to spare, and am come to spend it with you."

He sat down on a little garden chair, under the luxuriant jasmine, and began to talk to her. A sense of peace and repose came over him when he was with Eve; and so soon as he was with her he forgot all else.

When they had been talking for some time he looked at her; and then he saw how true Mrs. Lonsdale's words were. The sweet face had grown very thin and pale.

"Eve," he said, gently, "you are not well. Why do you not go to the seaside for change of air?"

"I am happier here than I should be anywhere," she replied.

His ears detected a tone of patient weariness in her voice.

"Have you any trouble or sorrow? Trust me, as I trust you."

"I have no trouble," she answered—"and heaven has been very good to me."

But six weeks after Felix had gone away she sat under the luxuriant jasmine, and once she cried:

"Oh, my love, you will never know in this world how I love you!"

CHAPTER XXVI.

One fine morning in September a letter came to the office of Lonsdale & Son which presented very familiar features to those who received it. The creamy color of the envelope, the delicate handwriting, the faint perfume of violets, the crest on the seal—each and all were familiar.

"It is from Lady Chevenix," said Felix, as he placed it before his father—of all the letters that had been received from her he had never opened one.

Mr. Lonsdale read it, and then looked at his son.

"She is coming home," he announced.

"She will be at Garswood by the end of the week, and wants me to see that everything is ready for her."

Darcy Lonsdale rode off at once with his good news; and very pleased the household at Garswood was. Their young mistress had been worshipped among them, and they were delighted at the thought of her return. Mr. Lonsdale gave all necessary orders, so that Lady Chevenix should find everything ready on her return, and should not miss any comfort or luxury.

At the end of the week another letter came to the office at Lillford, asking Darcy Lonsdale to go over to Lady Chevenix at once. He went, and on his return he said to Felix:

"There is a terrible accumulation of work at Garswood. Lady Chevenix wishes me to remain at the Hall for a week—the Michaelmas accounts are always heavy—but, Felix, I cannot spare a week. Lord Arlington's reud-dinner and many other things are close at hand. I made a suggestion to Lady Chevenix, which she seemed very pleased with; that was that, instead of my going to the Hall for six days, we should both go for three—that is, of course, if you are willing."

"It is a matter of indifference to me, father," he replied. "Whichever plan suits you best, or pleases you best, I will follow."

So it was settled that they were to go to the Hall, and to all the business as quickly as possible there.

"I shall prefer sitting up at night," said Felix. "I can always work better when there is perfect silence. A few hours' extra work each night, and we shall soon have finished."

He little dreamed to what that sitting up would lead.

They went on the Monday evening—a beautiful autumn evening, when the sunbeams fell on the grey walls and lighted up the picturesque mass of buildings. Several visitors were at the Hall. Captain Hill, Mrs. Hays, Miss Hethcote, Lady Brownson and Miss Fern—all guests whom Lady Chevenix had invited.

In kindliest greeting she held out her white jeweled hands to Mr. Lonsdale and his son; but her marvelous beauty had for a few minutes stricken them dumb.

"I am so delighted," she said; and truth be told, she was very glad to see them. I would see you here first, away from the other guests, because I wanted to talk to you. Mr. Lonsdale, take the easy chair. Felix—she had quite fallen into the old fashion of calling him Felix—"sit here. I did not see you"—to Felix—"to bid you good-by; but I am pleased to see you on my return. There is no place like home, after all, is there?"

Normandy was very beautiful, but Garswood is home. Now tell me all that has been done in Lillford since I left. You were at Lady Maude's wedding—tell me about it, Felix. I am so glad she married her hero after all."

They spent one of the pleasantest hours that could be imagined. The same idea struck both father and son. Lady Chevenix seemed to have grown young again; her sunny smiles, her unusual gaiety, her ready replies, her ready denials, her enjoyment of their society—all were noticeable. She had indeed altered; she was like beautiful Violet Hays; all trace of the quiet, cold Lady Chevenix had vanished.

Then her smiles died away for a few minutes as they talked of the terrible trial they had gone through together. She looked with soft, luminous eyes into Darcy Lonsdale's.

"What old friends we are!" she said, thoughtfully. "And how strange it seems that you should have been with me when he died—that Felix should have been my chief comfort! What a riddle life is to read!"

As Felix Lonsdale wrote busily the next night there came to him the memory of a story he had read, in which a lawyer like himself sat alone in the library of a country house, and the servant of the day owner came to tell him of some wrong he had done in life.

"It is a pleasant thought!" smiled Felix to himself; and then he was startled for a moment. A faint odor of violets floated near him, and, looking up, he saw Lady Chevenix.

There was something more than beauty in her face; he saw it the moment he raised his eyes to meet hers. There was love—love such as had not shone there since she had hidden him farewell. The freights gleamed on her jeweled hands, on her marvelous face, her golden hair. She stood before him in all the pride and magnificence of her wealth and her loveliness, a vision such as rarely greets the eyes of men. And, as he looked at her with somewhat of wonder and inquiry on his face, she spoke slowly on to her knees and bent her head before him.

"Lady Chevenix," he cried, "you must not do that! I cannot allow it!"

She laid her hand on his arm—the hand on which she wore her wedding ring.

"Listen to me, Felix," she said—and the sweet voice stirred unwontedly his heart and soul. "I have waited impatiently for this hour. You are going away to-morrow; and I must speak to you—right away, before you go."

"How can I help but listen?" he replied. "What do you wish to say to me, Lady Chevenix?"

With a charming gesture of impatience she laid a finger on his lips.

"You must not call me 'Lady Chevenix,'" she said. "I am 'Violet' to you. Say 'Violet,' and then I will tell you what I came for."

"Perhaps," if he had had time to prepare himself, to think matters over, to take some precautions, he would have known better how to listen and what to say. As it was, she seemed suddenly to have taken possession of him, of his whole nature.

"You make me say what you will, Violet," he said.

She clasped her hands, and laid them upon his arm.

"I want to tell you a story, Felix," she said. "I have a story to tell you—a story young, foolish and, the world said, fair. She was vain, too, of her beauty, and expected to achieve great things with it. She loved with all her heart someone who was more than worthy of her love, and she promised to be his wife. But sorrow and misfortune came to him, while a wealthy woman sought her—one who offered her wealth and title, houses and lands—and she—well, I am the friend of her, Felix. She was vain, and weaker than a woman; she was young, too, and not overwise. She had nobility enough, however, to see what was right, though not to do it. She was tempted by her love of luxury and comfort—she was badly advised, wrongly influenced; and she, weaker than a woman, gave up her lover—the one man in the world whom she loved—she married the wealthy suitor. How she suffered no one knows, no one can tell. Her marriage turned out to be a most disastrous one. Then, after long years of humiliating servitude, she was alone again and free. What do you think she did, Felix?"

"I cannot say," he replied in a low voice.

"I will tell you. After those long years she found that she still loved the dear companion of her youth. She said to herself that she had never married—perhaps he still cared for her—and one night, when he was sitting alone, she went to him—as I have come to you—kneeling by his side, as I kneel by yours—and prayed to him—as I pray to you—'Oh, my lost love, my dear love, forgive me, and take me to your heart again!' And the lovely head dropped until it lay upon his arm."

He made no answer just then. His whole soul was stirred within him—his whole heart touched. After a few minutes she raised her face to his, and he saw tears upon it.

"Violet," he said, "I do not know what to say to you. You have taken me so completely by surprise. I am lost—bewildered. I cannot collect myself."

"I thought you would say 'Yes' to me at once," she returned, sadly. "Oh, Felix, have you not forgiven me? Tell me that first. Have you forgiven me?"

He looked at her thoughtfully, watching the freights gleaming on her golden hair and on her rich jewels.

"Yes; I have forgiven you, Violet—I forgive you long ago."

"Quite, or was it only a half forgiveness, Felix?"

Brings On Heart Disease.

It has been known for many years that the most fertile cause of heart disease is rheumatism. Only recently has it been realized, however, that many cases of rheumatism which give rise to heart complications really run so mild a course that they are not suspected of being serious and are neglected. This is especially true in cases which attack the very young. In children rheumatism often masquerades under the name of "growing pains." In infants it often fails completely of recognition.

It has become the custom to a lamentable degree to give for the colic, the various anti-pyretic drugs—antipyrine, phenacetin and the like—besides various derivatives of salicylic acid. These drugs alleviate the rheumatic pain by benumbing the nerves; they also lessen fever. The result of their use is that patients are enabled to move about much sooner than they otherwise would, and this throws extra work on the heart and leads to post-rheumatic heart complications which may cripple the organ for life. The recent increase in the number of refusals of risks by life insurance companies is thought to be due to this cause. Doctors here from many parts of the world deprecate the present excessive use of these drugs. Pain is nature's demand for rest. To allay it without reaching its cause is to drug the sentinel who watches over the citadel of health because his footsteps disturb our sleep.—New York Post.

Moral Squalor on a Dog.

A clergyman who went up into the country to preach, and lived there a considerable time, had occasion in his ministrations to drive regularly over a certain road. At a house on that road lived a big bulldog which always came out and attacked him viciously. The minister stood this for a good while, until, finally, as he drove past one winter night in a low sleigh, a means of correcting the dog by moral suasion occurred to him. He stopped his horse in the road before the house. The dog rushed out madly, barking and threatening to jump into the sleigh. The minister sat in his sleigh and paid no attention. The dog retired, returned to the assault, retired again, and a third time rushed out to the attack, but did not touch the man. Then he returned to the doorstep and laid down, apparently utterly crestfallen and disgusted with such a man; and, as he paid no further attention, the minister drove off. After this the minister drove many times past the house, but the dog paid no attention to him, and never seemed to see him at all. He was cured.

A Coffee Barometer.

It is claimed that the "coffee" forecast is a reliable way of determining what the weather is going to be. In order to tell what the weather will be you must drop carefully into your morning cup of coffee, prepared with the milk, two lumps of sugar. Do not stir the coffee. If the bubbles ascend rapidly, separate quickly and fly to the side of the cup, there will be much rain within the next twenty-four hours. If they gather slowly and gravitate in a cluster to the side only possible showers may be expected. But if they remain placidly in the center of the cup you may wear your best hat and leave your umbrella at home when you take your walks abroad.

Cars Heated by Hot Air.

A new type of electric heater for rooms and street cars consists of a combination of an electric fan in a bell-shaped case with porcelain cylinders wrapped with German silver wire. The cylinders are heated nearly red-hot by means of electric current in the wire, and the fan blows a current of air over them, warming it as it passes, and thus accomplishes ventilation and heating at the same time. The supply of air may easily be taken from out of doors, so that such an apparatus will supply clean, warm air to an apartment, and may thus replace the furnace register or steam radiator.

Married to a Flower Vase.

A correspondent writing from Spang-hai says that a young Chinese lady there has recently been married to a red flower vase, the vase being a substitute for the son of a wealthy mandarin to whom she had been engaged. Her fiancé died just before the contemplated marriage and as she vowed she would never wed another the flower vase was substituted for the bridegroom and the marriage celebrated with all due pomp. These impromptu marriages are not uncommon in China.

Game Birds Hailing from China.

To China we owe several game birds—the golden pheasant, the silver, the reeves, the Lady Amherst and the ring-neck pheasant—the Cochon China fowl and other poultry and several kinds of ducks.

STUDIED WITH KWANG HSU.

Fellow Student of the Chinese Emperor Visits San Francisco.

Leung Kai Tin, a fellow-student of Emperor Kwang Hsu of China, is in San Francisco. Even to see the Emperor is a rare privilege, denied the great majority of the almond-eyed. The fortunate Celestial who rubs elbows with his majesty is slaugherly honored by his countrymen. But he who breaks through the sacred inner circle, and lives in daily communication with the Emperor of China is almost a divinity to the half-a-thousand million less fortunate subjects.

Such a dignitary is Leung Kai Tin, who owes the proud privilege of his personal communication with the Emperor Kwang Hsu to the fact that he is a pupil of Kang Yu Wei, greatest of Chinese scholars and reformers. It was Kang Yu Wei who first started the reform bee buzzing in the royal bonnet. The young Emperor finally lent a listening ear to the teachings of Kang Yu Wei. He became a pupil of that great teacher. This naturally made the Emperor eager to meet the most brilliant scholars of Kang Yu Wei. Among the young men brought into the royal presence were Leung Kai Tin and Leung Kai Tin. Leung Kai Tin was the younger brother, but equally clever for his years, and an ardent reformer.

When jealousy made it imperative that the young Emperor have less frequent counsel with Kang Yu Wei, it was decided to confine their intercourse to letters and to have these missives carried to and fro by some trusted friend of reform. Leung Kai Tin was one of those who bravely offered his services for this delicate and dangerous task.

When the Emperor saw that his reformers had endangered his own safety and that of his advisers, and that matters were nearing a crisis, he sent a secret message to Kwang Yu Wei, informing him of the peril that was threatening all reformers. He bade them fly at once.

Six of the most promising advocates of reform were butchered at the instigation of the Empress Dowager before they could make their escape, but Kang Yu Wei, Leung Kai Tin, Leung Kai Tao, and several others managed to escape.

Leung Kai Tin came to the Pacific coast to carry the doctrine of reform to every city and village where his brother Chinese congregated. In San Francisco there are an especially large number of progressive Chinese, who believe that the light of modern civilization should penetrate the gloom of China. Their battle cry is: "Give back the throne to the young Emperor Kwang Hsu." They would have the Empress Dowager divested of every vestige of power.

Leung Kai Tin, though still in his twenties, is a man of marvelous ability. He is a scholar, not only learned in the musty philosophy of the Orient, but well versed in the history of other nations and what has made their success. He is an eloquent speaker, and his lectures to his countrymen in the United States have stirred them greatly.

FLIES HAVE EYES TO BLIND.

Four Thousand in a Bunch on Each Side of the Head.

Whoever thinks the male superior animal finds no rest for the sole of his foot in the contemplation of what we, in the sublimity of our self-conceit, call "the lower animals." In our general ignorance of the housefly we do not know just how foolish and no account the male is, but we may reasonably infer that he is as markedly deficient as usual, seeing that his eyes are so close together that they touch each other. That's always a bad sign. If you see anybody with eyes close together you are entitled to think little of his intelligence.

The fly has two sorts of eyes, the big compound one, 4,000 in a bunch on each side of the head, for knocking about in daylight, and there are simple eyes on the top of the head for use in a poor light, saying and fine print. Before going into ecstasies of admiration over the creature that has 4,000 eyes on each side of its head it might be well to remember that they are not of much account. In case of old flies kept over winter the compound eyes cave in and get broken, yet the fly seems to get along and find food. One kind gentleman vanished over the simple eyes and plucked off the wings of some flies. He found that he might hold a candle close enough to burn the compound eyes of the fly before it had a suspicion that anything out of the common was going on. In daylight he took a knitting needle and brought it up in front of the fly close enough to touch his antennae before it dodged. If the knitting needle was brought up on one side Mr. Fly picked up his sticking plaster quite lively.—Ainslee's Magazine.

Gentle Sarcasm on Athletics.

With reference to the dedication of the athlete at public schools, the Oxford Magazine has the following: "It appears that a few days back the vice chancellor received the following letter from a gentleman: 'How much would I have to pay for the education of my son in your university? Let me know if I shall have to pay more in case my son, besides rowing, should wish to learn to read and write.'—St. James Gazette.

A Matter of Principle.

"I suppose you will take a great interest in the campaign." "I should say so!" answered Senator Sorghum. "I would be culpable if I failed to do so. It was always my belief that when a man invests his money it is his duty to stand by and see what becomes of it."—Washington Star.

No one is so bold that he is not afraid of a dentist.

P. D. Armour of Chicago, "the old man of the market," has a contract from the Russian Czar to ship 7,000 cattle to that country from San Francisco. It is easy enough to secure the cattle, but the question of transportation is an enormous task. There are not boats enough on the Pacific coast to carry the cattle. Those who know Mr. Armour, however, are confident that he will solve the problem. If not, it will be the first time that the greatest trader in the world ever received an order that was too big for him.

The last great coup of P. D. Armour was made in connection with the Leiter wheat corner in 1897. This corner was months in maturing. It sent the price of grain soaring. Joseph Leiter was a foe worthy even of P. D. Armour. It is now a matter of common history how Armour wriggled out of a "squeeze" that would have meant financial death to 999 men out of 1,000. He transported millions of bushels of wheat from Duluth to Chicago by boat in the winter months when navigation was supposed to be closed, and delivered it to Leiter. It was an expensive affair for Mr. Armour, but in the end it smashed Mr. Leiter.

GOVERNOR McCORD

Recommends Peruna to All Catarrh Victims.

Hon. M. H. McCord.

Hon. Myron H. McCord, ex-Governor of New Mexico, in a letter to Dr. Hartman, from Washington, D. C., says:

Dear Sir—At the suggestion of a friend I was advised to use Peruna for catarrh, and after using one bottle I began to feel better in every way. It helped me in many respects. I was troubled with colds, coughs, sore throat, etc., but as soon as I had taken your medicine I began to improve and soon got well. I take pleasure in recommending your great remedy to all who are afflicted with catarrh.—M. H. McCord.

Thousands of cases of chronic catarrh have been cured by Peruna during the past winter. There are no successful substitutes for this remedy. Send to Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio, for a free catarrh book.

Predict a Cold Winter

WINTER.

WEATHER prophets all agree that the coming winter will be of unusual severity, though few of them will say just how cold it is going to be. Andrew Jackson Devoe, the New Jersey expert who foretold the Galveston storm a year ago, however, pins himself down to dates and figures. Mr. Devoe is famous not only for his remarkably successful predictions, but also because of his method, which are peculiar to himself. His deductions are made entirely from astronomical data, and he claims that he can anticipate the formation of a storm or any condition of the atmosphere, while by the method which the government employs one has to wait until such a condition has already formed before making any prediction about it. Mr. Devoe, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer, predicted a very cold fall and a severe and early winter. The coldest weather might be expected, he said, in December, which would also be very stormy. By cold weather, Mr. Devoe said, he meant what is popularly known as raw weather, and he promised it with good sleighing. Winter, according to Mr. Devoe, will start in to do business about Nov. 8, when we will have a cold wave which will make last winter's weather seem very tame. From that time till the end of the month there will be a succession of storms and freezing weather. In December there will be heavy storms the 6th and 8th, and sleigh riding during the middle of the month, when zero weather will prevail. Christmas will see a slight change, but zero weather will begin in January with snowstorms and a taste of the weather of years ago.

Reports from a certain class of weather observers are not obtainable. These are the squirrels, which are said to lay in an unusual store of nuts when a heavy winter is coming on. As these reports come in from country districts, pretty nearly every autumn, there has been a loss of confidence in the squirrel as a weather observer. His forecast, however, is the only one needed now, and it will be interesting to see if it bears out the predictions of the weather prophets.

WAS ONCE A BAREFOOT GIRL.

Grace Carr, of Louisville, to Wed a British Baronet.

Miss Grace Carr, the one-time Hoosier girl who is married Lord Newborough, of Wales, in London, in November, was, eight years ago, a barefoot girl, living in a cabin in Southern Indiana. The story illustrates anew that there is no social glory to which the American girl may not aspire.

The Carr family formerly lived in Richmond, Ind. The father had been a soldier in the Civil War. The pension allowed his widow was the only income the family had. One member was an invalid boy, who required so much of his sisters' time that they could not go regularly to school. They removed to Louisville and lived in a house little better than the one they had occupied in the Indiana town.

A fashionable physician was struck by the unusual beauty of Alice Carr, and she shared the educational advantages of his own daughter. They took her to New York, where her beauty attracted much attention. She became Mrs. Samuel

MISS GRACE CARR.

Chauncey, wife of the Brooklyn millionaire. Grace stayed at home and took care of the invalid brother until he died. She grew more retiring. Society did not interest her. Last year she went abroad with her mother and sister. It was while "doing" the monumental wonders of the desert that they met Lord Newborough. The Englishman laid his title, his possessions, his "prospects," together with his heart, at the feet of American beauty. And American beauty was gracious, and accepted them all.

This and That.

This year has continued the greatest season in the history of lake traffic.

One hundred and fifty firms in this country manufacture school text books. Coal from West Virginia is now being used to get up steam on English ships of war.

ABOUT THE ELECTION

PRESIDENCY NOT THE ONLY IMPORTANT ISSUE.

Nearly Half the States Elect Governors This Year—Some Notable Contests, Particularly in the West—Interest in the Congressional Elections.

Interest in the presidential election which takes place Nov. 6 is so great that the public loses sight of the other offices which are to be filled that day. Not so with the political managers. They are in constant and close communication with the party leaders in all the States and both sides claim that some big surprises are in store.

Next in importance to the presidential issue is the House of Representatives. The Republican claim that they will have a majority of 15 or thereabouts. The Democrats claim that there is great hope for them in the narrow margin which the Republicans claim. Both sides are making an aggressive congressional campaign, particularly in the West, where the principal orators of both sides are bending all their energies in behalf of the congressional nominees.

Nearly half the States in the Union will elect Governors in November. Several, notably Maine, Vermont and Oregon, had their gubernatorial elections in September and the Republicans triumphed.

The most important State election, after that of New York, where Benjamin B. Odell opposes John B. Stanchfield, is that in Illinois. Here Richard Yates, son of the war Governor of Illinois, is the Republican nominee and is opposed by Samuel Alschuler, a well-to-do Aurora merchant. As in New York State, the voters have appeared somewhat apathetic in the governorship contest. Indiana elects a successor to Gov. James A. Mount. One of the most spirited governorship contests in the West is in progress in Missouri, where the veteran Congressman, A. M. Dockery, is the Democratic nominee, and Joe Flory is in the Republican ticket. Other Western States which elect Governors are Colorado, Kansas, Michigan, Montana, North and South Dakota, Wisconsin, Wyoming, Utah and Washington. Streams of oratory are flooding these States and hundreds of thousands of dollars are being spent in red fire, bands and other campaign materials.

Massachusetts elects a Governor every year. W. Murray Crane, the Pittsfield man who has served as Governor one term, is again the Republican nominee and expects to repeat upon Robert Treat Paine, Jr., Boston's aristocratic but popular young Democrat, the thrashing he gave him a year ago. In Connecticut George P. McLean is the Republican nominee for Governor and in New Hampshire the Republican nominee is Chester B. Jordan. The Democrats are making little effort to elect their candidates in these States.

Other States electing Governors are Delaware, North and South Carolina, West Virginia and Tennessee.

In some of the States the legislative contests are made interesting because they have a bearing on the election of United States Senators. The Senators whose successors will be chosen by the Legislatures to be elected this fall are Berry of Arkansas, Wolcott of Colorado, Kenney of Delaware, Bacon of Georgia, Cullom of Illinois, Dooliver of Iowa, Lindsey of Kentucky, Baker of Kansas, Caffery of Louisiana, Hoar of Massachusetts, McMillan of Michigan, Nelson of Minnesota, Wallcut of Mississippi, Carter of Montana, Thurston of Nebraska, Chandler of New Hampshire, Swayell of New Jersey, Butler of North Carolina, Tillman of South Carolina, Pettigrew of South Dakota, Turley of Tennessee, Martin of Virginia, Elkins of West Virginia, and Warren of Wyoming.

Ten candidates for President and Vice-President will be voted for Nov. 6. Ballots will not be cast for all of them in all the States, but the ten parties will be represented at the polls in most of them. State tickets will be numerous, Illinois and Indiana leading with seven each. The following are the various candidates for President and Vice-President:

REPUBLICAN.
President—William McKinley, Ohio.
Vice President—Theodore Roosevelt, New York.

DEMOCRATIC.
President—William J. Bryan, Nebraska.
Vice President—Adlai E. Stevenson, Illinois.

POPULIST.
President—William J. Bryan.
Vice President—Adlai E. Stevenson.

SILVER REPUBLICANS.
President—William J. Bryan.
Vice President—Adlai E. Stevenson.

MIDDLE-OF-THE-ROAD POPULISTS.
President—Wharton Barker, Pennsylvania.
Vice President—Ignatius Donnelly, Minnesota.

PROHIBITIONIST.
President—John G. Woolley, Illinois.
Vice President—Henry B. Metcalf, Rhode Island.

UNION REFORM.
President—Samuel T. Nicholson, Pennsylvania.
Vice President—Samuel T. Nicholson, Pennsylvania.

UNITED CHRISTIANS.
President—Dr. S. C. Swallow, Pennsylvania.
Vice President—John G. Woolley, Illinois.

SOCIAL DEMOCRATS.
President—Eugene V. Debs, Indiana.
Vice President—John H. Hare, California.

DE LEON SOCIALISTS.
President—Joseph F. Malone, Massachusetts.
Vice President—Valentine Remmill, Pennsylvania.

"I could't Sew another Stitch to Save my Life."

A gorgeous costume flashed beneath the brilliant lights of a ball room. The queen of society is radiant to-night.

The nervous hands of a weak woman have toiled day and night, the weary form and aching head have known no rest, for the dress must be finished in time.

To that queen of society and her dressmaker we would say a word. One through hothouse culture, luxury and social excitement, and the other through the toil of necessity, may some day find their ailments a common cause.

Nervous prostration, excitability, fainting spells, dizziness, sleeplessness, loss of appetite and strength, all indicate serious trouble, which has been promoted by an over-taxed system.

For the society queen and the dressmaker alike, there is nothing so reliable as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore strength, vigor, and happiness.

Mrs. Lizzie Anderson, 49 Union St., Salem, N. J., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it is my duty to write and tell you how grateful I am to you for what your medicine has done for me. At one time I suffered everything a woman could. I had inflammation of the ovaries, falling of the womb, and leucorrhoea. At times could not hold a needle to sew. The first dose of your Vegetable Compound helped me so much that I kept on using it. I have now taken six bottles and am well and able to do my work. I also ride a wheel and feel no bad effects from it. I am thankful to the Giver of all good for giving you the wisdom of curing suffering women. I recommend your medicine to every woman troubled with any of these diseases."

Mrs. Sarah Swoder, 103 West St., La Porte, Ind., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—It gives me great pleasure to tell you how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I had been a sufferer for years with female trouble. I could not sew but a few minutes at a time without suffering terribly with my head. My back and kidneys also troubled me all the time. I was advised by a friend to take your medicine. I had no faith in it, but decided to try it. After taking one bottle I felt so much better that I continued its use, and by the time I had taken six bottles I was cured. There is no other medicine for me. I recommend it to all my friends."
